Dramaturgically idiosyncratic, but always warm-hearted and likeable feel-good movie

Emmanuel Courcol

Thibaut is a famous conductor who tours concert halls all over the world. In the middle of his life, he learns that he has been adopted and that he also has a younger brother, Jimmy, who works in a school kitchen and plays the trombone in the brass band of a working-class town. The two brothers couldn't be more different. There is only one thing they agree on: their love of music. Thibaut is impressed by his brother's musical talent. He wants to right the injustice of their fate and give his brother the one chance he never had: to develop his talent, follow his heart and win a national competition with the small orchestra. Jimmy begins to dream of a completely different life...
